2024 Session Began Tuesday

Jason White was formally elected as Mississippi's Speaker of the House on Monday, January 2nd as the Mississippi legislative session got underway. The representative from Attala County in the central Mississippi town of West takes the place of the retiring Philip Gunn of Clinton and in his remarks told the House that MS Republicans have the votes to take the state in any direction they want to take it. Rep. Manly Burton of Moss Point became the new speaker pro tempore. White was surrounded by family as he took the oath of office for the next four years. Healthcare was mentioned as a part of his list of priorities.

He suggested adding to Gov. Tate Reeves ideas of helping Mississippi with healthcare initiatives. In September, the Governor announced a series of Medicaid reimbursement reforms in Mississippi, which he estimated to generate approximately $700 million for some of the state's financially struggling hospitals.

Speaker White kept coming back to the Republican majority in the House as starting point for pushing a more conservative agenda across the finish line. He said that when Gunn took the Speaker job, "he made a right turn for Mississippi, and we want to keep that going."

Medicaid expansion has continued to be a hot-button issue. Mississippi has 73 rural hospitals. Six have closed since 2005, and 31 are at immediate risk of closing because of severe financial problems. State economists have said Mississippi could receive about $1 billion a year from the federal government for Medicaid expansion. Governor Reeves and other opponents to expansion have said it would not be the best approach to alleviating financial pressures on rural hospitals. White recognized the Governor's efforts on this front, but said he also wants to look at new avenues of funded.

"I am simply asking for open minds from House members, our friends in the Senate, the legislative brand, the Mississippi business community and, most importantly, our healthcare industry," White said. "It will take everyone to explore solutions for our working folks who need health insurance."

Republican Lt. Gov. Delbert Hosemann and six other statewide officials will be inaugurated Thursday, January 4th. Hosemann returns for his second term as the leader of the Senate and is term-limited to two terms. MOS looks forward to working with both the House and Senate to tackle important issues like scope of practice, PBM reform and transparency, prior authorization, review of the medical cannabis program and telemedicine programs, Medicaid expansion and all other concerns for patients and the practice of medicine in the state. The 2024 Session will run for 120 days and end in early May 2024 according to the legislative deadline calendar.

MPA Private Practice Committee Seeking Input from Membership

Per the MPA Private Practice Committee, providers are having a very difficult time with Walgreens. The chain made an edict that they would not fill stimulants if the physician was 50 miles distant from where the prescription is being filled, usually in the patient's hometown. In addition, Walgreens at times may be the only pharmacy in the area with the stimulant in stock or available. They have since changed this to leaving it totally at the discretion of the pharmacist to fill or refuse to fill the prescription, regardless of the clinical situation. A specific provider has had difficulty with one prescription for Paxil that is due for a refill on Christmas Day and the pharmacist would not allow an early refill, even though by law (we believe) they can fill up to 3 days early and told the patient he could pick it up on Dec. 26. Supposedly, this all stems from Walgreens being hit with a large fine by the DEA for using pharmacy techs to fill controlled substances with no pharmacist in the building. This has been increasingly frustrating for physicians, patients, and pharmacists as we have rotating shortages of medications and pharmacists to fill them. If you have a story or anything patient related that you can share, please send to mpa39206@aol.com.

52 Weeks of Progress

Each week this year, DMH will be highlighting a specific service or program to increase awareness of services and supports available. In the last week of 2023, we have two additional items to highlight – Intensive Community Services and Mississippi State Hospital's Forensic Services.

A new initiative that we haven't yet highlighted is the Forensic Services web site that has been established through Mississippi State Hospital. Forensic Services provides evaluation and competency restoration services for Circuit Courts throughout the state. DMH has been actively working to address the needs of stakeholders within the forensic mental health and criminal justice system, and this site is part of that commitment. It provides quick and easy access to documents and resources for judges, attorneys, court administrators, and more. It's available at www.forensicservices.msh.ms.gov.

You were introduced to PACT, ICORT, and ICSS earlier this year, but we wanted to highlight how these numbers have changed from FY22 to FY23. These three services are designed to treat people in their homes and in their communities without the need for inpatient service at a hospital. In FY23, a total of 2,215 people received treatment through these programs, a 20% increase over the 1,842 served in FY22. We are encouraged to see the continuing use of these community services!

We hope that throughout this year, you've learned more each week about the services available through DMH and Mississippi's public mental health system. We look forward to sharing the continued progress in our state with you in a new way during 2024!

Wall Street Journal Wants to Speak with Mississippi Psychiatric Providers

We'd love to speak to folks on the ground who have questions about what happens after the reversal of the lower court's ruling and can speak to and give real life examples of both the progress that has been made and the critical holes that remain. To that end, we'd love to chat with providers who have seen—and are seeing firsthand—the ongoing challenges you and others have described of trying to treat people in the community and keep them from being committed multiple times. Whether it's the lack of continuity between hospitals and community health centers or the gaps in service when someone is discharged, we're looking to talk with people who have been grappling with this and trying to improve it. It could be anyone in your network of course—PACT teams, community health centers, peer support workers, etc. All providers along with their responses may remain completely anonymous. Our hope is that a story like this can help inform the public and policymakers in Mississippi -- and anywhere else where there's a debate underway about how to meet the mental and behavioral health needs across a community.

I will be coming to Mississippi in January and happy to connect with anyone that wants to see positive outcomes for patients.

THREE THINGS TO KNOW ABOUT: CONSULTS

Written by
Professional Risk Management Services® (PRMS®)

1. Medicine is a collegial profession, both in theory and in practice, and physicians consult with one another regularly. There is in fact an expectation of consultation, particularly when faced with a situation beyond one's usual area of expertise or level of experience.
2. Consults may be formal (where the patient is seen by another psychiatrist who examines the patient and renders treatment advice) or informal (also known as a "curbside" consult where the other psychiatrist is presented only with a scenario or specific questions).
3. Diagnostic formulation probably should not be entrusted to a curbside consult. Because of the potential stakes, the same likely holds true for most admission or discharge decisions. Diagnosis and admission or discharge decisions in most cases should be the subject of formal consultations rather than curbside consultations.
